

CHAPTER VI

WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT

Kadluk, why do you always stare at the Raven when you see one flying?” Amy asked.

“I don’t always stare at him, but sometimes I talk to him and sometimes I need his help,” replied Kadluk.

“How could the Raven help you?” Ty wanted to know.

WHAT ARE YOU LOOKING AT

"He helps me in lots of ways. He has the ability to speak anyone's language. When I am looking for something and cannot see it from where I am, the Raven will let me look through his eyes as he flies around and I can see a lot more through his eyes from high in the sky than I can through my eyes while I'm here on the ground," Kadluk advised the kids.

"Jiminy-Willie-Peppers, you mean you can see through the Raven's eyes?" Parker exclaimed, unable to believe his ears.

"That is correct; I have often used the eyes of the Raven to look over the country side to find things I cannot see from where I am," Kadluk informed the kids as he thrust his chin forward to emphasize his point.

"Could we use his eyes to do that?" Amy wanted to know.

"But of course you could, if he will let you, for you have shamanistic powers like I do," replied Kadluk.

"Will he only let shamans see through his eyes, Kadluk?" Parker wanted to know.

"Only a shaman has the ability to see through the eyes of the Raven. Why do you think a shaman has special powers? Do you think everyone would have the ability to do this?" Kadluk asked as he sternly looked at the kids and shook his head.

THE CREATOR

"Well, we can talk to anything just like the Raven!" Ty boastfully declared.

"Ty!" Amy scolded her brother.

"You don't have the ability to talk to all things like the Raven! You can only talk to their Inuas! The Raven has the ability to speak directly with whomever he wants because he can speak anyone's language!" Kadluk advised the spellbound kids.

"Jiminy-Willie-Peppers," Parker muttered as he stared at Kadluk.

"Why can the Raven do that?" Amy asked Kadluk.

"Because he is the Creator and that is the way it has always been from the beginning," Kadluk announced as he proudly stood before them.
